A collective exhibition by 18 artists unravels the many roles of the creator as a storyteller, collector, dreamer and observer

The great James Whistler once observed that an artist is not paid for his labour, but his vision. The ongoing curation, The Artist As, at Tarq captures the many roles that said artist inhabits during the transformation. Curated by Vaidehi Gohil and Sonakshi Bhandari, the exhibition features 18 artists, with each artists' presentation centering on a singular chosen role.

From Sameer Kulavoor and Ronny Sen's response to the contemporary city, or Saubiya Chasmawala and Soghra Khurasani's explorations of identity and relationships, and Areez Katki, Rithika Merchant's take on familial, oral and cultural histories to name a few, the works question the artists' role as a constructor of meaning.

Gohil shares, "Through a curatorial methodology that encourages collaboration with the artists, a series of interconnected moments of conversations come together to create a new discursive space around artistic practice."

Till August 14; 11 am to 6.30 pm (Tuesday to Saturday)

At Tarq, Ground floor, KK Chambers, Azad Maidan, Fort.

Walk with Mid-day: The Ballad of Ballard Estate

Did you know that there is a club in the city where women sailors can find accommodation? Or that the architect of the Gateway of India designed Ballard Estate? From a marshy space of excavated sand and stone to the city’s most well-planned business district, and the heartbeat of its glorious maritime past, Ballard Estate is a charming, tree-lined treasure trove of stories about early Bombay’s mercurial rise as a shipping and naval hub. Walk With Middy is back and in our newest trail, #FionaFer...
