The organizers of the India Art Fair have named more than 120 participants in its eighteenth iteration, set to run February 4–7, 2027, at the NSIC Exhibition Grounds in New Delhi. Among the returning international galleries are Galleria Continua, neugerreimschneider, Sundaram Tagore Gallery, Whitestone Gallery, and David Zwirner. India's Nature Morte, whose founder, Peter Nagy, died last month, will be present, alongside well-known Indian galleries Chemould Prescott Road, DAG, Experimenter, Jhaveri Contemporary, and Vadehra Art Gallery.

The fair will welcome a cadre of fresh faces this year: Delhi's Pristine Contemporary, Gallery XXL, and Gallery Vayu are all making their debuts, as are London's Chilli, and the Opera Gallery, which has sixteen outposts worldwide.

"The 18th edition of India Art Fair reflects the remarkable energy and ambition of South Asia's artistic landscape today" said fair director Jaya Asokan in a statement. "What makes our 2027 fair particularly exciting is the momentum we have built through our year-round programming across the country."

The fair promises an expanded Design section featuring both established and emerging studios, and will center the relationship among art, craft and design practices, while the Focus section will highlight works by artists

Among the projects and interventions planned for the fair are Jitish Kallat's architectural reworking of his 2015 work Here After Here After Here, which will see him cover the fair's exterior with highway signs; a large-scale outdooor Birender Yadav installation presented by the Kiran Nadar Museum of Art, and a textile work by December Design honoring Jaipur's three hundredth anniversary, presented by the City Palace Museum.

The India Art Fair was founded in 2008 in New Delhi. It is owned by Montgomery Arts, which runs regional art fairs including Hong Kong's Art Central, Shanghai's Photofairs, Taipei Dangdai, Sydney Contemporary, Singapore's Art SG, and Yokohama's Tokyo Gendai. Plans for a Mumbai iteration were scrapped ahead of its planned 2025 launch and to date have not been revitalized.
